OUR WORDS ON YOUTH, COMMUNITY, ENGAGEMENT & GIVING BACK.

Where We're From

I'm from the generation of blindness
So caught up in ourselves.
Our lives
Our problems
Our success

The world's most important letter
Is between h and j

Two eyes focused on the small circles of their own being.

I'm from the generation of possibilities
So perfectly thought out in precision
But never taken into action.
Too afraid of loss
Too afraid of risk
Too afraid of failure
Too afraid to struggle

To the point where our potential is whispered away
And we will never know what it could have become.

I'm from the generation of comparison
Success is measured meticulously on things that mean nothing.
Money is more of an opportunity than friendship
Power is more appealing than family
Fame is more important than being yourself

And we end up driving down a highway of doubt Crashing into each other along the way

I'm from the generation whose problems are like all others
It's not just us.
There's also those who came before
And those who came before them
Fingers can't be pointed at just one

But hands can come together
To protect the future that could be different.

- Maddy Streng

The lake stretches endless beyond vision.
The sun shines on mostly clear waters.
But the farther you go,
The bottom becomes less visible.
Perhaps it holds great secrets.
Ships lost to time,
Monsters and horrors incomprehensible,
Beauty beyond all understanding.
Perhaps it holds those things.
But we do know it holds something else.
Something we put there.
Our garbage.
Our waste.
Most of it from the past two generations.
The life once thrived in the lake must now be burdened by the unwelcome guest.
Our waste.
At its bottom, we desire to take its treasure.
The essence of beasts lost to time.
We mustn't give into the temptation.
Protect the lakes.

- Coltrane Bodby-Mast

Tall
A huddle clumped together with High hopes.

Eyes fall to the grass Slick from the morning dew and shivers fill the extra space.

The jarring wind whipping hair, stinging faces.

Nothing but each other for support but, here we are,

hear us now,

YOUTH ARE

Involved

Life on the court

The court is coarse and the day is hot
The sun shines down piercing into my eyes, Each point lasts and eternity but seems to fly by Serve and serve and serve Point, game, set, match
Back and forth I run
The court is my life, it is my home

ARE

Passionate

Don't Wait.

Youth is defined as the span between childhood and adulthood. The negative connotations associated with the time period is synonymous with "naive," "ignorant" and "inexperienced." Today's youth are pushed aside, told to stay out of "adult" conversations. They are made to sit at the kid's table, isolated from conversations that matter. Youth are hushed, told to wait until they're older.

There is a pattern among youth. In our minds, our opinions hold no value until we're older. Our actions must wait until we're older. Change cannot happen until we're older. Every dream and hope will only come true when we're older.

The minds of today's youth are plagued with this false perspective. Our youth is seen as a transitional stage from child to adult, from bystander to active participant, but where the time in between is simply for waiting. Waiting for adulthood.

Have we forgotten about the influence of youth? Have we forgotten that our youth is of paramount importance to the development of our future selves? It is a time to be heard, take action, and make change. We are told to wait. We are told that we do not understand. It is the individuals that do not listen that make history:

Mikaila Ulmer created a lemonade business to support bee advocate organizations at age 13. Salvador Gómez Colón, 15, started the Light and Hope for Puerto Rico campaign to raise money and awareness after the hurricanes. Krtin Nithiyandam, at age 17, is creating a more effective method for treating triple negative breast cancer.

When youth realize their potential, skill, and voice, that is the time for change. That is the time for youth. The time is now.

Just a Globe

It stands on its own,
bright and proud, to many just a globe.

But to me,
so much more.
It shows me world issues,
and places that need help beyond belief.
But to many, it is just a globe.

I look at the globe, and learn so much.
I learn about myself, as well as all the places in the world that need help.
Although, it is just a globe.

It cannot fix global problems, or change the world forever, because it is just a globe.

The globe, in fact,
can make about as much change as a book.
After all, the real change is made by you and I.

And what we choose to do with objects we are given.

-Chloe Weigel

Youth.
We are the next change.
We are not enslaved to the words and discouragement of the skeptics.
We will forge our own path, and daze our doubters with our might.
We are surged with the brawn and intellect of our ancestors.
Our blood ripples, and creates momentum.
We will impact this declaration of land.
We will blossom fears and realities.
And we will erupt Michigan with the salty sweat and the sandy strength of our passion for change.
So, watch us go.

- Habeeb El-amir

When the wind whips by and the rivers run dry and you no longer know what it means to be alive

When the birds and the bees don't sing in the trees and the lies all around you bring you to your knees

When the best book and the best nook have been burned by Beatty and taken by crooks

When everything beneath you falls away and you can't seem to go another day

If in that time, you can stay alive. If you can live and love and strive and thrive. Then the world will be your oyster, and life will be sweeter than honey from a hive

American Teen

Sometimes, it's not a matter of if,
But of when.

Nearly every teenager in the country,
Has wondered,
Will it be me next?

Will it be my school?
My classroom?
My closet?
My life?

Will my life be taken,
Because of a lack of policy?
Or rather,
A lack of empathy?

We all wonder,
Do the people really care
More about their guns, Than our lives?

Every time,
Over, and over again,
We have found,
That they do.

So we scream,
And cry
And march

But sometimes,
The cards are stacked against you,
And we might just have to wait it out,
Until we are old enough to make the change we want to see

Sadly,
Some of us don't have time To just Wait it out

So this is my plea,
To the nation
To the people
To the "United" States

Your children are terrified
They are dying
They are begging
To just live another day

You have the power to make this change
Or at least A change

So stop hiding behind Theoreticals
And start making change

Because if you don't,
I may not have the chance
To finish this poem

- Jalen Greene

Tornado with bright eyes
Tearing through the skies

Hurricane with a heart beat Sowing and reaping so sweet

Tsunami with still waters
Filling your empty harbors

I am about to strike
I am exploding
Weather or not you like I am not imploding

- Emma Visker

I've scored goals that didn't make the difference.
I've won the start but lost the race.
I've written wonderful words for blind eyes.

What is the point?
Why do we kill ourselves to fail?
If a few successes come from one hundred attempts why bother?
Like sharks, we have to move.

Successes are small:
a good victory in a losing season,
a great paper in a failing grade, a gorgeous start in a race I'll lose.

Never stop, Never give in,
Because on the one hundred and first attempt,
The world will become your oyster.
